

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

At the information delivery server, access logs for accesses to information items made by users are managed, and a correlation detection condition indicating at least one information item is received from a client. Then, related users who made accesses to that at least one information item are detected according to the access logs, correlated information items that are accessed by the related users are extracted according to the access logs, and the correlated information items are delivered to the client.

15

20

25

30

35